NOVEMBER by David Mamet closes out Dragon's 1st season in Redwood City

A lesbian, a turkey lobbyist, and a Native American walk into the White House... it's not a bad joke, it's November by David Mamet (Glengarry Glen Ross). There's hilariously biting commentary on the state of the union, a politically incorrect (and possibly inept) president in the death throes of his failing re-election campaign, and some Thanksgiving turkey pardons for sale - so basically it's vintage Mamet. Please be aware that this play contains a good deal of adult language (which is also vintage Mamet).

WHO: Written by playwright David Mamet, directed by Troy Johnson

Troy has been directing at small theatres around the Bay Area for the past 18 years, and he is thrilled to be directing his first production at Dragon in their fantastic new space. Recent directing credits elsewhere include Intimate Apparel and Fifth of July at the Pear Avenue Theatre in Mountain View (as well as several editions of their annual short original works program, Pear Slices); Avenue Q for Stage 1 Theatre in Newark; and Crimes of the Heart and Enchanted April for Broadway West Theatre in Fremont. From time to time, Troy also appears onstage, and you may have seen him as Mitch in Dragon's 2011 production of A Streetcar Named Desire.
